TAKE 2 FIX 2. The greens at Snee are putting great. The biggest eyesore right now is unfixed ball marks—something that is within our power to correct! Even if you don't hit a green, just remember to fix 2 ball marks on every green. It just takes a couple of seconds.... Your golfing experience will improve.

The 3 Priorities

Sharpen these 3 skills and your scores will improve!

Get the ball in play off the tee, 2 putt, and wedge it on the green. That's the formula, in order, to play better golf.

Driving the ball in play is the most important factor in playing better golf.

Obviously, the longer the drive (in play) the better, but more important than even length*, is simply being 'in play'. That might mean putting your driver, or even all your woods away on certain holes or for the entire day. Get the ball in play, and your confidence will rise and your scores will fall.

Two putts. Putting is the second most important skill in shooting low scores. Most golfers just need to 2 putt more often, or at least on average in order to see scores improve. Yes, to shoot mid to low 70's, you probably need even fewer putts, but most golfers just need to reduce the number of times they 3 putt in order to score better! Instead of trying so hard to hole the 20-foot putts for par, make damn sure you 2 putt with improved skills of 'touch' (distance control) and secure your bogie. Driving the ball in play, and hitting better wedge shots (the 3rd skill on the ladder) will give you more chances to make pars in the long run.

Wedge it on the green. Hitting great iron shots is fun, but it's incredibly difficult and probably overrated in terms of lowering your scores. The truth is a golfer trying to break 80 only needs to hit about 4-6 greens per round if they are driving the ball in play, consistently wedging the ball onto the greens, and having a 2 putt mentality. If you hit 6 greens in regulation, we'll assume you've made 6 pars. If on the other holes you have driven the ball in play and wedged the ball onto the green, you only need to make 4 putts in order to shoot 80! The key is to not get greedy on all wedge shots. Work on your skills, and make sure hitting the green is the priority. You'll have your chances!

We tend to lose too many shots by hitting driver out of play, 3 putting, and hitting lousy wedge shots. Improve these 3 things, in order (drive, putt, wedge), and you'll shoot lower scores.

Now go PLAY GOLF!

*For four professionals, length begins to trump hitting fairways. The big hitters are so long, they are better off in the rough with a wedge in their hands than if they laid back to a 7 iron in the fairway. But hey, you're not on tour yet, so to just shoot in the 70's- GET THE BALL IN PLAY!
